

Hierarchy

Directors: We are the founders of this Nonprofit. We appoint tasks, coordinate potential and lead the hierarchy holistically, ensuring that everyone has a voice within the organization. Secondly, we take in the suggestions, ideas, and issues that may arise while being part of the organization. Additionally, we manage the external affairs of the nonprofit. These include funding, marketing, and holding the non-profit status of Illuminate. Lastly, we orchestrate the process in which people are appointed through interviews, forms, and discussion.

As of now, the directors of Illuminate are as follows:

Nidhish Kakkireni

Arnav Joshi

Dhruv Nandy

Sarvesh Shanthibooshan Subramanian

Vinh Tran

Hoang Nguyen

Vice Presidents(VPs):

Context: Illuminate runs on different departments working together that manage the organization. The Vice President's responsibility is to lead one of these departments. The departments are as follows:

- ★ Social Media Vice President: Open!
 - The Social Media Vice President manages the social media of Illuminate. Their main responsibilities include: posting videos, updates about changes, teasers, and broadcasting important events to our online audience.
- ★ Visual Media Vice President - Filled

- The Visual Media Vice President manages the visual aspect of Illuminate. This can include videos both in and out of the website and pictures during in-person events.

★ Outreach Vice President - Open!

- The Outreach Vice President manages the diffusion of Illuminate. This individual actively discusses our goal to potential candidates, manages, creates, and spreads awareness.

Website Vice President - Filled

The Website Vice President helps the directors build and maintain the website. They make sure that articles are being uploaded timely, technical issues are being solved, and features are working properly.

Note: New roles might be added in the future.

Common misconceptions:

- Vice Presidents are NOT Officers, meaning they do not manage content within the website (sole exception is the website VP). Instead, they lead departments of Illuminate(as specified above).
- Vice Presidents aren't the next level of Officers. Vice Presidents have a special expertise within their designated department. For instance, the website VP might have the special skill of programming. On the other hand, officers use their expertise and experience in a subsection like Arts and Performance.

Responsibilities:

- 1) Vice presidents must actively connect with the directors, officers, and other vice presidents to guarantee the completion of tasks
- 2) Vice Presidents must do their best to complete their tasks on time while also matching the outline specified by the directors.
- 3) Vice presidents have to try to offer their expertise that can add to the articles created by the associates.

Officers: Officers have a substantial role in this organization. They serve as the leads for each subsection of the six fields. For instance, within the Extracurriculars field, an officer may lead the subsection of Arts and Performance. The officers are responsible for overseeing the associates who write the articles of each subsection. Lastly, Officers offer their expertise and experience to the associates, where the associates put it into words.

Responsibilities:

- 1) Must lead the associates in their designated subsection
- 2) They must actively update and communicate with the VPs and Directors on their associates' progress.
- 3) They must offer their advice and expertise to the associates in order to produce quality articles that effectively help readers.
- 4) They are responsible for making sure that their assignments (for themselves and the associates) are completed on time.
- 5) They must also actively assist the directors and associates in managing events. (This is not extremely strict, and volunteer hours will be provided)

Common misconceptions:

- Officers are not Vice Presidents, meaning that they don't lead a department of the non-profit which contributes to the organization as a whole. Instead, they serve as leaders within their subsections in the website to guide the associates as they write their articles.
- Officers don't earn their position automatically, they start off by writing content as an associate. Consequently, they climb their way to being a leader based on the special leadership traits, and expertise within their content. The promotion is decided by the directors through a holistic process.

Associates: Associates are the backbone of Project Illuminate. They use their knowledge and experience to write and create content for their desired subsection.

- For example, an SAT expert can write article(s) and research, review, and list related resources on their SAT prep content page.

The specific checklist for each article will be provided once the associate is accepted (shared through a folder).

Associates must be able to portray what the officers are attempting to create. Their writing must be detailed, credible, and easy to understand.

Responsibilities

- 1) They must have strong communication with Vice Presidents, Officers, and Directors.
- 2) They must follow most, if not all, of the requirements listed in the checklist
- 3) They must be able to complete their assignments within their deadlines(which are mostly flexible)
- 4) They should be able to put themselves in the reader's shoes and understand the issue at hand.

Members: All these efforts of coordination, quality information, and expertise are meant for the members. They are the obtainers of the information and use it for their academic journeys. There is no specific path or application to become a member as most of our information is open source